

Project: Send Aymaran Youth to a Good College

Life in rural Bolivia can be terribly hard. Being born here often means here you stay – in a poverty that keeps getting worse. Education is a way to a better life.

Our project assist young men and women to attain their dreams. In response, they contract to return to the area and serve with the skills they've learned. During their university tenure, they return during vacations to serve as assistant catechists and to motivate the next generation.

Costs for tuition and materials: $750.00 per year. I know, it sounds impossible, but it's beyond the reach of our folks without help. The Salesian college here provides top-notch education at what is an extremely reasonable cost in US standards.

- A donation of $60/month will just about cover it.
- A donation of $30/month covers half – you could partner with a friend.
- Or, you could donate the full amount right away, if you have the capability.

The important thing is to think of a commitment of four years for these kids.... They really need and deserve our help, don't you think?